

330 GUIDE SIGNS

It is impossible to sign for all destinations, turnoffs, or local points of interest, and drivers must be expected to make reasonable preparation for locating their destination. Normal destination signing provides the complementary information necessary for their success.

Drivers are expected to have information that is readily on State road maps or on more detailed street maps of metropolitan areas. They are also expected to relate their destination to the appropriate street name or number, community, or other destination associated with the highway turnoff.

Sign sizes and legends for various type facilities are found in the Manual of Approved Signs.
